

ABSTRACT

A collapsible hand-operated hauling device is disclosed which is structured of sturdy, yet lightweight material for hauling matter, and which is structured to be collapsed or folded into a smaller size so that the hauling device can be lifted and stored, on a wall for example, or placed in a car trunk or truck bed for transport, for example. The collapsible hand-operated hauling device generally comprises a bed, having sections that fold together, at least one handle and a wheel assembly.